Register of Debates in Congress

The Register of Debates in Congress was a summary of the U.S. Congressional sessions from 1824-1837, and is the second of four in a series of publications containing the debates of Congress. It was preceded by the Annals of Congress and succeeded by the Congressional Globe and today's foremost source of Congressional information, the Congressional Record.

The Register of Debates was the first of the Congressional proceedings to be contemporaneously reported and published, beginning with the 2nd session of the 18th Congress, Dec. 6, 1824 through the end of the 1st session of the 25th Congress, Oct. 16, 1837, in all, 14 volumes in 29 books.

All of the proceedings involve debate or some incident novel or important in character. The debates are not necessarily reported verbatim, but their substantial accuracy may be relied upon. The record of each House of Congress is arranged by sessions, as in the Annals, with the exception of the first volume, which is by days, as in the Globe and the Record.

An Appendix attached to the last volume of each session contains the messages of the President, the most important reports from the departments of government and committees of Congress and all acts passed during the session.

For consistency, Hein's reprint set has been bound to match the original set. This valuable publication makes an excellent addition to any academic, law, or government library collection!
